Emergency / Distress Phase: COVID-19

Developments

The civil protection authorities’ Coordination Centre coordinates all action and disseminates information regarding COVID-19 all over the country. Dissemination of information, making of instructions and advice to the public, to institutions and enterprises. All instructions can be found on the Directorate of Health website, the National Commissioner of the Icelandic Police website and the covid.is information website.

Statistics for Iceland

One infection was diagnosed in Iceland in the last 24 hours. The number of people in Iceland with confirmed infections is currently 1,799, there are 66 in isolation and 1,723 have recovered. The total number of domestic infections is 1,457. A total of 50,477 samples have been taken, including 71 in the last 24 hours. 10 of the people diagnosed with COVID-19 in Iceland have passed away.

According to the National University Hospital as of 4/5 there are currently 3 patients in the hospital with COVID-19, of which none are in intensive care or on respirators. 59 are being monitored by the COVID-19 outpatient unit, including 5 children who are being monitored by the Children’s Hospital. 1752 individuals have recovered and 102 individuals have been discharged from the hospital. No employees are subject to quarantine or isolation.

Information sharing and projects

National Commissioner of the Icelandic Police’s Department of Civil Protection and Emergency Management, COVID-19 press conference

Monday 04.05.2020

Director of Health Alma D. Möller, Chief Epidemiologist Þórólfur Guðnason, and Chief Superintendent of Police Viðir Reynisson reviewed the status.

CS Reynisson started the conference by announcing that the decision has been made to reduce the number of COVID-19 press conferences. There will be three conferences this week, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. He thanked everyone who has been involved in this project. The good cooperation we have enjoyed has been vitally important. We are all civil defence. The epidemic has had extensive effects throughout society and we are feeling somewhat fatigued and are waiting for life to go back to normal. We must continue to avoid creating risks for the community and stand together. He then thanked everyone for their support. He also mentioned a community accord that will be publicised in more detail in the next few days.

Dr. Guðnason reviewed today’s statistics. There were no diagnosed cases in the last 24 hours. The number of cases is still low and there are few community infections. This is a good time to stop and take a look at the results. The epidemic peaked at the end of March. We managed to repress the epidemic faster than anticipated. There were many influencing factors, including widespread sampling, contact tracing, quarantining, isolation and the participation of the public in all that most Icelanders are connected to the sports movement in one way or another. This difficult time, and they have used all the resources that were available. Ms. Halldórsdóttir reminded the listeners its activities characterised by a great deal of resilience. Everyone has been unite

Rut Halldórsdóttir discussed the sports movement and its role in general terms and said it was solution light at the end of every strengthening the health and also the environment we live in, such as support from family, friends and the health effects, which is unique. However, the fight is not over a

Dr. Guðnason also mentioned instructions for self care system in general. It is unclear what effects this has had on other diseases. Dr. Guðnason discussed a recent Gallup survey which shows that 96 % of the country’s population think the authorities are handling the COVID-19 situation well. He said it was encouraging to feel that trust. The survey also shows that 80–90 % of the population have altered their habits to avoid infection, wash their hands regularly, avoid shaking hands, hugging and kissing. Other infections have also gone down in the community, such as respiratory infections and diarrhoeic epidemics, with the numbers seen in April being lower than ever. This behaviour change in the country’s population has returned more than just prevention of COVID-19. There have also been fewer visits to health-care clinics and the health-care system in general. It is unclear what effects this has had on other diseases. Dr. Guðnason also mentioned instructions for self-employed workers that have been posted on the Directorate of Health website under the heading „COVID-19: Economic activities and travel services“. Instructions about travel services will be issued tomorrow.

Director of the National University Hospital Páll Matthíasson reviewed the hospital’s statistics, which include 3 individuals with active infections and 16 admissions. No patients are in intensive care or on respirators, and 84 are being monitored, including 4 children. None of them are in immediate need for hospital admission. Looking at the experiences of the last few months, it is clear that the chain of responses and coordination have had their effects, which is unique. However, the fight is not over and we must keep our vigilance and be ready to respond. This will be a trying time and we will need to keep our focus for many months. Patience is the key to overcoming this disease. There is an increased focus on perseverance – tenacity – resilience in the field of mental health, to endure difficulties and overcome them and learn from them. We must stay our course and continue to be flexible and resolute, and have the resilience to handle the blows and rebuild. Personality and attitude towards difficulties are very important factors, and also the environment we live in, such as support from family, friends and the health-care system. We must work together as one whole. Selfishness and focusing on one’s own interests are no good. Showing altruism and changing one’s behaviour is important under circumstances like these. In the years to come, we must focus increasingly on strengthening the health-care system. Let’s look after each other and stand behind those who are weakest. There is a light at the end of every tunnel.

Saturday 02.05.2020. Participants: Chief Superintendent of Police Viðir Reynisson; Secretary General of the National Olympic and Sports Association of Iceland Líney Rut Halldórsdóttir; General Secretary of Breiðablik sports club Eysteinn Pétur Lárusson; and coach and motivational speaker Pállmar Ragnarsson. In today’s press conference, Líney Rut Halldórsdóttir discussed the sports movement and its role in general terms and said it was solution-focused and all its activities characterised by a great deal of resilience. Everyone has been united in their efforts to work together during this difficult time, and they have used all the resources that were available. Ms. Halldórsdóttir reminded the listeners that most Icelanders are connected to the sports movement in one way or another. There are a total of 1,300 functional
Mr. Eysteinn Pétur Lárusson began by thanking everyone who has continued their training, saying that coaches, parents and practitioners all deserve praise. The situation has been a considerable challenge for everyone and all have put in a united effort to make things work. He said that the sports clubs were being shown deep trust by allowing children and teens to resume training, and that it was important not to betray that trust. If we play our cards right, there will be further lifting of the restrictions. It is all in our hands.

Mr. Pálmar Ragnarsson said the time had finally come when we could start training – sports are an integral part of the lives of children and teens. Parents are heroes for raising such excellent kids. Mr. Ragnarsson said that the country’s children are tough and some would return in better shape than they were in before the ban on social gatherings. As for the kids who do not feel they can go back to training, he said that they could always seek help, from the sports clubs or from professionals.

Finally, he stressed that we all still need to be on our guard and follow the rules on general disease prevention. It is important to continue to respect the rules on social distancing that are still in force, and remember that they were imposed for a reason. We do not want a resurgence of the epidemic.

Sunday, 03.05.2020. Participating in today’s civil protection press conference were Director of Health Alma D. Möller; Chief Epidemiologist Dórrólfr Guðnason; and Chief Superintendent of Police Viðir Reynisson. The conference’s special guest was the President of Iceland, Mr. Guðni Th. Jóhannesson. CS Reynisson especially welcomed the President of Iceland to the meeting. Dr. Guðnason then reviewed the most important statistics. One person has been diagnosed by deCODE in the last 24 hours – in the West Fjords – and currently a total of 1,799 cases of COVID-19 have been diagnosed in Iceland. A total of 400 samples were tested yesterday. A total of just over 50,000 samples have been taken, meaning that around 14 % of the nation have been tested. Around 20,000 have finished their quarantine. Statistical information about COVID-19 can be found at the covid.is website. Dr. Guðnason announced that blood testing to measure COVID-19 antibodies among the public was beginning, in collaboration with deCODE. This testing is carried out under the auspices of the Chief Epidemiologist and will be useful for making decisions on various community disease prevention measures in the weeks and months to come.

Dr. Möller reviewed the situation within the health-care system and how things have been going. In the beginning, the decision was that the main focus would be on protecting the vulnerable groups and stand together to overcome this crisis, and to ensure the safety of the employees, and this has been successful. People do not seem to have hesitated to seek other health-care services. It is important to examine public health, and Dr. Möller pointed out a survey that is being carried out by scientists at the University of Iceland in cooperation with the Directorate of Health and urged everyone to participate through the lidanicovid.is website. It is important to learn from this situation and reorganise the health-care policy under the leadership of the Minister of Health. Dr. Möller also pointed out an undertaking led by the Prime Minister, to achieve the United Nations’ Sustainable Development Goals. This undertaking is meant to promote prosperity, peace and solidarity to the good of the earth and humankind. The undertaking includes a project to promote health and well-being for all.

The President of Iceland, Mr. Guðni Th. Jóhannesson, said he was honoured to be given this opportunity to address the public at this turning-point, when the protective measures that have been in force will be relaxed tomorrow, saying it is important to give praise for everything that has been properly done. The President mainly discussed and stressed four points: sympathy, solidarity, gratitude and the future. He said that gratitude should be shown, “let gratitude land where it belongs” – thanks should go to all health-care workers and front-line workers, in schools and to all those who have done their jobs conscientiously during these times, and also to those who have raised our spirits, such as artists and musicians. He also discussed the importance of solidarity and teamwork, which can make all the difference. He thanked the triad for encouraging enduring solidarity, not by issuing orders or lording it over everyone, but by making recommendations, giving guidance and advice based on scientific knowledge, so that we can understand that what is being done is the only right thing to do under the circumstances. Everyone deserves thanks. We are at a turning point in civil protection and virus protection – now we must continue; we should not let loose now.
Collection of blood samples throughout Icelandic society to evaluate the distribution of SARS-CoV-2, which causes the COVID-19 disease, will begin this week. Currently, samples are only being taken from individuals who are having haematology work done for other reasons. Samples are not being taken from individuals who have no other reason for having haematology work done, and antibody testing at the request of a doctor is not being done at this stage.
